Quote for March

"Irish? In truth I would not want to be anything else. It is a state of mind as well as an actual country. It is being at odds with other nationalities, having quite different philosophy about pleasure, about punishment, about life, and about death".

Edna O'Brien

Honour for Irish Author

In recognition of International Women's Day 2021 we celebrate the literary achievements of Edna O'Brien and congratulate her on achieving the highest cultural distinction in France, Commander of 'Ordre des Arts et Lettres'!

From 'The Country Girls', which was banned in Ireland, to her last book 'Girl', a harrowing portrayal of the young women abducted by Boko Haram, Edna has always been a leading voice for women. She will receive her award on March 7, the eve of International Women's Day, from the French minister of culture Roselyne Bachelo. Works by Edna may be accessed in ebook and eaudio on our online library lending service Borrowbox. For all details of our online services go to www.cavanlibrary.ie!
